NEW WEBSITE MAKES VOLUNTEERING EASY

Ferntree Gully based disability support service, Interchange Outer East has a new website which makes finding out about volunteering opportunities an easy process.

“Our new site is informative, fun and inviting” said Sandra Leehy, Interchange’s Publicity Officer “a simple click of the mouse and information is sent immediately to your inbox. There is lots of information on volunteering for both our host and recreation based programs on the actual site, including a frequently asked questions section and profiles of current volunteers. But if you would like a few more details, the response is immediate.”

“Volunteers are a vital part of our organisation and we are hoping this will really simplify the process and mean people are better informed when considering volunteering with Interchange as an option.”

“The new site is not only about putting information out there, the Member Noticeboard function on the website and links to Interchange Facebook and Twitter sites, enable us to get lots of feedback from the entire Interchange community – families, volunteers and staff - making sure we continue to deliver the best service for everyone.”

The new site has been developed in collaboration with web design company, WebDynamic, and will be officially launched at Interchange Outer East’s inaugural conference, which is being held on 20th & 21st April.

Interchange Outer East supports people with disabilities and their families living in Melbourne’s outer eastern regions. For more information about services or volunteering opportunities visit www.ioe.org.au or call 03 9758 5522.
